KATINA PAPPAS Operations Director

Upon graduating from the University of Virginia in 2005, Katina spent four years in New York City completing a two year analyst program at Jefferies & Company in the Media & Telecomm investment banking division. But a natural inclination for the restaurant business beckoned, luring Katina Pappas to study at the French Culinary Institute. Following her culinary training, Katina joined Georgette Farkas in the Public Relations and Marketing department at Chef Daniel Boulud's Dinex Group, departing in 2009 to attend Harvard Business School. From there she went on to work for a year as Operations Director for a multi-unit sandwich chain in New York City. The note of southern charm beneath Katina's steely analytical approach belies her upbringing in Houston where her family has owned and operated a group of 100+ restaurants since 1976.

We believe bringing Katina on board as a founding member of the Rotisserie G team is one of the smartest decisions we've made. Her impeccable judgment and character, not to mention her experience in finance systems, and establishing procedures has been essential to establishing a healthy foundation for our business.
